

Flower bud and with petals and stamens partly removed shows a Chinese etrog which is already split into fingers.

□

□

Chinese Etrogim growing on a tree

Chinese etrog with fingers opened

Chinese etrog in which the fingers have not opened

Mixture of Chinese Etrogim two of which the fingers have opened whilst in third one the fingers are closed

Chinese etrog which has been cut in half.
There is no flesh inside it – only pith.

Chinese Etrogim being sold at a market in Adelaide Australia