

For the Jewish Day School, one can organise seminars in which the pupils go to say into the country for a few days for a programme of study with recreation. I have just returned from such a seminar of my school which we held in North Wales for three days. In the morning we had Jewish Studies programme and in the afternoon and evening a recreation programme. ~~Throughout~~ ^{during} the day we had services in a Shul we set up. Before meals the pupils washed their hands (Netilat Yadayim) and after the meals Birkat Hamazon which the pupils said ~~sang~~ with great fervour. In this way pupils lived in a 24 hour a day true Jewish atmosphere.

The day following the Port Dinorwic trip, I spoke at a Symposium and I included a brief report of this trip.

Jumbo-size train ticket which I purchased on this Port Dinorwic trip at this "long-named" Welsh village.
